thought for the week

The story of Pentecost challenges us to get out of our comfort zone and into the less predictable life that God's Spirit may be pointing us towards. For, if we are to learn anything from the feast, it is to be open to Spirit of God, which is as dynamic today as it was at the inception of the Church. We must listen to the Spirit, interpret what is being said to the Church today, and be relevant to the world standing outside the Church. The world needs the message of the risen Christ, the hope that faith offers.

pray for...

- the diversity of languages and ethnicities in our church family that enriches our relationship and our wider understanding of the global world
- Thy Kingdom Come and all who have given and received prayers during this initiative. Pray for inspiration to continue on this path to further the Spirit in ourselves and others.
- those who suffer loneliness and isolation, that the Spirit of Pentecost may touch their lives through the grace of our ascended Lord Jesus.
